

Job Description

Job Name

Head of Individuals and Societies Faculty

Job Summary

Applicants with HK Curriculum, IBMYP and IBDP expertise and leadership experience would be considered for the position of Head of Faculty.

The Individuals and Societies Faculty offers a S1-S3 programme that incorporates disciplines traditionally studied in the humanities, as well as disciplines in the social sciences. Within Hong Kong, it is often referred to as Integrated Humanities or Personal, Social & Humanities Education (PSHE). Within a junior form context, this includes subjects such as Geography, History and Marketing. Chinese History is also offered by the Faculty and is in its second year of course implementation. In the Senior curriculum students can opt for a broad range of HKDSE or IBDP subjects in addition to Liberal studies as part of the HKDSE.

The successful candidate would support, develop and lead a team of subject specialists in nurturing learners to respect and understand the world around them, equipping them with the necessary skills to inquire into historical, contemporary, geographical, political, social, economic, religious, technological and cultural factors that have an impact on individuals, societies and environments. The faculty is well-resourced with a large team of enthusiastic and knowledgeable teachers. The Faculty caters for a large number of senior students, many of whom proceed to tertiary education studying business, economics, law, engineering, geography, history and other humanities-related courses or in double degree courses with science, the arts and medicine as majors.

Application Process and Timeline
